Owning SMO

An Owning relationship is the primary relationship between a Security Management Office and an individual in a Person Category. An Owning relationship generally reflects the person's assigned or employing organization. There are three possible types of Owning relationships, all based on access: SCI, Non-SCI, or Non-Access. (Non-Access refers to suitability and trustworthiness determinations, a future JPAS feature). Each Person Category is limited to one Owning SCI relationship, one Owning Non-SCI relationship, and one Owning Non-Access relationship. Thus, one Person Category could have more than one Owning relationship, but only one per access type.

Servicing SMO

A Servicing relationship reflects the capability to provide security services on a temporary basis outside of the person's Owning unit or organization. Servicing relationships are established as the need arises. They may be based on the need to provide security services for a school assignment or TDY/TAD; to administer a special access; to fulfill a shared services agreement; or any other operational reason. Just like Owning relationships, Servicing relationships are defined by access type: SCI, Non-SCI, and Non-Access. However, unlike Owning relationships, there is no limit to the number of Servicing relationships per Person Category.
